2011 Workplace Leaders in Financial Education Award Call for Entries

If you have taken the lead on financial education in the workplace, you understand that employees who have less financial stress at home are healthier and more productive employees at work. Now it is time to be recognized for your leadership. To submit your workplace program for consideration, visit wlife.org.

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Society for Human Resource Management – with the encouragement of the U.S. Department of the Treasury – have joined forces to raise awareness of the responsibility companies have in offering workplace financial-education programs.

This new award for Workplace Leaders in Financial Education recognizes organizations with exemplary workplace financial-literacy efforts to enhance employee financial well-being, and encourages employers to implement and further develop financial-literacy programs.

Winning organizations must provide financial-education programs to employees that increase their ability to make sound financial decisions and improve employee financial well-being. Workplace financial-education programs help employees manage all aspects of their finances, from setting a budget and managing debt to paying for college and saving for retirement.

It's time to show your leadership again, submit your program for Workplace Leaders in Financial Education Award consideration at wlife.org.
